

9 Top Students Visit National Supply Company

The visit of nine top students from Torrance's three high schools to the National Supply Co. proved a good educational program, Assistant Superintendent Albert Posner reported to the Board of Education last week.

Under the program, the nine boys spent three afternoons at the National Supply facilities, talking to top officials and watching plant operations at first hand. They were given problems to solve, based on what they found out.

Eggum, Howard Borer, and Mike Sims, North High; George Cobabe, Gary Hand, and David McGuire, South High; and Tom Colman, Don Cannon, and David Nelson, Torrance High. They were selected on the basis of their grades and on the recommendations of their teachers.

A study of the program indicates that students and company officials felt it was quite successful, Posner said.

"I was able to see things put to use that I have been studying in math and science and I saw many things I need to study further," one student said.

Consulting with the students at National Supply were Clinton Cooke, general superintendent, fabrication; William R. Patterson general superintendent, steel; Philip J. Bauer, chief chemist; Todd Gardner, plant metallurgist; John T. Evans Jr., melting superintendent; Allan H. Freedman, research metallurgist; Melvin G. Gunn, maintenance superintendent; Walter B. Levy, supervising research metallurgist; Henry J. Moreau, electrical engineer; and Jackson R. Nichols, research metallurgist.
